Post-Conflict Development in East Asia

Edited by Brendan M. Howe

'In this timely book, a dozen top development and international relations scholars look in detail, country by country, at the reality behind East Asia's economic miracle. Adopting a human-centered perspective, they distill concrete lessons from both good and bad governance in the region. Their rich analyses will be valued by many scholars and practitioners of East Asian development.'

Ian Holliday, The University of Hong Kong

This volume critically assesses measurements of success in East Asian post-conflict development from a human-centered perspective. This involves a major re-evaluation of accepted accounts of domestic governance and international relations in East Asia from both a comparative and inter-disciplinary viewpoint. This book is rich in case studies and provides policy prescriptions for East Asian donors and actors in an effort to provide Asian solutions for Asian problems.
