

Haviland e-news letter

Woojin Jung has been selected as one of twenty 2016 Human Rights Center Fellows from four University of California campuses. Over the Summer, she partnered with Nari Gunjan (Women's Voice) in Bihar State in India, whose mission is to empower Dalit (the scheduled caste) girls and women through the medium of education.

An excerpt from Woojin's report on Human Rights Center's blog can be found at <http://hrc.berkeleylawblogs.org/>

Below is a July, 2016 news letter from Human Rights Center.

Human Rights Center Fellows fan out worldwide

Woojin Jung, a 2016 Human Rights Center Fellow and Ph.D. candidate in Social Welfare, works with a women's project in India.

Our largest cohort of Human Rights Center Fellows to date--20 students from UC Berkeley, UC Santa Cruz, UC San Diego, and UCLA--has hit the field. They are conducting research on the sexual exploitation of children in Brazil, developing a litigation guide to equip lawyers and advocates in India, investigating the needs of Syrian refugees in Greece, evaluating the efficacy of transnational policing in countries throughout Africa's Sahel, and so much more. Find dispatches from our fellows on the HRC Blog and learn more about all of the fellowship projects.
